

A yellow triangle pointing downwards, located to the left of the 'BLOGS' header.

BLOGS

Archives;Employment Law Updates;Health Care

Employer Health Insurance Mandate Gets “Yellow Light”

The Obama Administration announced on the afternoon of July 2 that it would not penalize employers that do not provide health insurance in 2014. The Affordable Care Act initially required that all employers with more than 50 employees provide coverage to workers or pay significant fines, beginning in 2014. The Treasury Department now says that it will postpone its implementation until 2015, largely due to employers’ concerns. Stay tuned for more specifics as the Treasury Department clarifies this and as employers figure out what this means for them going forward.

For an E-Benefits take on this issue — click here.