Lathrop GPM and Hopkins Carley Officially Combine Oct. 1, Enhancing Client Services and Resources

09/27/2024 | 3 minute read

KANSAS CITY, MO (October 1, 2024) —Today marks an exciting milestone as Lathrop GPM and Hopkins Carley officially combine under the Lathrop GPM name. The combined firm, an AmLaw 200 entity with approximately 360 attorneys across 13 offices nationwide, has launched its new website at www.lathropgpm.com. This combination enhances the capabilities and resources available to clients and grows the firm’s national platform, providing comprehensive legal services across a broad spectrum of practice areas.

The newly combined firm strengthens key practice groups and expands service offerings. Eight existing Lathrop GPM practice groups, including Private Client Services, have gained additional depth and experience. The growth in the Private Client Services Group positions the firm as one of the largest full-service teams advising ultra-high-net-worth and high-net-worth executives, business owners, fiduciaries and families across multiple generations.

“By joining forces, we have broadened our footprint in California’s dynamic legal market,” said Cameron Garrison, Managing Partner of Lathrop GPM. “The combination allows us to offer expanded services across our practice areas and reflects our combined commitment to fostering a culture of collaboration, diversity, accountability and client-focused solutions.”

Jennifer Johnson, former Managing Shareholder of Hopkins Carley and new Executive Committee Partner at Lathrop GPM, emphasized the benefits of the combination for both clients and attorneys: “This combination offers our clients enhanced services on a national scale and provides Lathrop GPM’s legacy clients with deeper access to our California-based practitioners. For our attorneys and legal professionals, it opens doors to new opportunities for growth and innovation.”

In addition to Jennifer Johnson, Lathrop GPM’s Executive Committee will also add Perry Woodward. The combined firm’s executive committee now includes:

- Michael Abrams, Kansas City
- Jennifer Reedstrom Bishop, Minneapolis
- Liz Dillon, Minneapolis
- Cameron Garrison, Managing Partner, Kansas City
- Ryan Gerads, Minneapolis / St. Cloud
- Jennifer Johnson, Redwood Shores

- Patrick McRorie, Denver
- Bryan Minier, Chicago
- Ryan Palmer, Minneapolis
- Marya Robben, Minneapolis
- Bridget Romero, Kansas City
- Brian Trinqué, Ph.D., Boston
- Perry Woodward, San Jose

In addition, Dori Yob Kilmer, former Executive Director of Hopkins Carley, will become Lathrop GPM's new Chief of Legal Operations.

"Dori brings a wealth of experience as a former litigation partner and executive director at Hopkins Carley. In her new role, she will lead our Knowledge Management, Legal Recruiting and Practice Management teams as they continue to expand their support of our attorneys and the firm in continuing to offer the legal services for which we are known," said Court Landon, Chief Operating Officer of Lathrop GPM.

The combination brings many new opportunities for attorneys and legal professionals, including serving a wider client base and collaborating across a broader range of practice areas. It significantly expands Lathrop GPM's real estate practice and enhances capabilities across many major areas, including litigation, labor and employment, intellectual property, corporate law, tax and business transactions.

The combination also bolsters Lathrop GPM's presence in the Bay Area, with new offices in San Jose and Redwood Shores becoming the firm's third and fourth largest offices, respectively. This expansion enables the firm to better serve clients with interests in Silicon Valley and beyond, thanks to Lathrop GPM's geographic reach and Hopkins Carley's strong presence and reputation in California's legal market.

Clients of both firms will benefit from expanded industry knowledge, practice depth and the ability to leverage cutting-edge technology and innovation to deliver results.
