Congressional, Regulatory, Grand Jury & Internal Investigations

Clients rely on Lathrop GPM for experience-based preparation and advocacy in critical situations, such as testifying before Congress, state legislative and regulatory bodies, and grand juries. When complaints of potential or actual wrongdoing or inquiries from federal or state law enforcement agencies occur, we conduct thorough internal investigations on behalf of clients. Additionally, we assist with responses to requests, letters and subpoenas seeking information from companies or individuals, and provide sound advice and counsel when search warrants are executed.

Trials & Arbitrations

When an amicable resolution cannot be reached, we collaborate efficiently and effectively with clients and aggressively advocate on their behalf to minimize business and personal interruption. Our team also represents individuals who are the subject of civil or criminal investigations, working to convince the government to refrain from bringing a civil action or criminal indictment. In those instances where the government insists on taking action, we work diligently to reach an appropriate resolution, which can include aggressively litigating the case before a judge, jury, or regulatory agency.

False Claims Act & Qui Tam / Whistleblower Litigation

For corporations doing business with the government, the False Claims Act can often feel like the omnipresent elephant in the room. We are well-versed in False Claims Act litigation and have defended corporations and executives in False Claims Act cases brought by federal and state government prosecutors, as well as by private whistleblowers in qui tam actions.

Corporate Compliance

We help clients navigate government investigations, litigation and enforcement actions. With a proactive mindset, we detect problems at an early stage and help clients attempt to deter wrongful conduct before it happens. Accordingly, we are frequently called upon to develop robust compliance programs for clients operating in heavily regulated industries. Recognizing that one size does not fit all, we work collaboratively with clients to develop policies, procedures and programs addressing their specific needs and ensuring agreement with the Federal Sentencing Guidelines. We also provide regular training for clients and their employees in an effort to foster a culture of compliance throughout an organization.
