Jennifer Reedstrom Bishop has worked exclusively with nonprofit organizations for over 20 years. Jennifer's practice is focused on the health care sector and she regularly advises physicians, hospitals, clinics, and other health care entities on negotiating the complex health regulatory environment. She also provides advice on strategic partnerships, including joint ventures, affiliations, medical staff matters, contracting, tax-exemption matters and a variety of business planning topics. Jennifer has a particular interest and experience in working in academic healthcare environments and brings a unique understanding of the complexity of those settings with an eye toward providing practical advice supported by deep technical knowledge.

Jennifer works in other settings within the nonprofit sector, from serving as outside general counsel to large academic-related foundations and private foundations, to assisting start-up nonprofits and religious organizations, her practice spans the spectrum of the nonprofit sector. She regularly counsels charities on accepting complex and unusual charitable gifts, such as LLC or closely held stock, as well as acceptable gift restrictions and donor involvement. Jennifer has unique insight in permissible restrictions on scholarships, including those which might be limited under Title VI and Title IX. She is keen on all issues facing nonprofits from mergers and acquisitions, joint ventures, and restructuring affiliated structures, to governance matters such as conflict of interest, intermediate sanctions, public charity status, and private foundation issues.

Jennifer is also a firm leader — she serves as Chair of the Health Law Practice and is a member of the firm's Executive Committee.
