

UST Symposium on Social Entrepreneurship

October 13, 2011

Sponsorship

Presented by: University of St. Thomas

Gray Plant Mooty is pleased to sponsor the upcoming UST Symposium on Social Entrepreneurship at St. Thomas University on October 13, 2011. Social entrepreneurship is a growing phenomenon driven by new business ventures in Minnesota and across the nation. This day-long event will bring individuals together to analyze various new social benefit models and investigate innovative ideas for forging their own social benefit partnerships.

Jennifer Reedstrom Bishop, chair of Gray Plant Mooty's Health and Nonprofit & Tax-exempt Organizations practice group, will serve on a panel during a morning session entitled, "Beyond the Bottom Line: Mobilizing the Power of Private Capital for Social and Financial Reform."

Business leaders, nonprofit directors and managers, entrepreneurs, policy makers, and philanthropists are encouraged to attend this dynamic, applied-learning event to deepen their knowledge and make personal connections with prospective partners.

The symposium will prepare you to:

- Apply what you have learned about game-changing trends and implications that are shaping a new social economy
- Focus your social impact goals and discern actions
- Expand access to human and capital resources
- Broaden your network and opportunities

Please register online now. Space is limited.
