

Records Retention and Document Management in the Electronic Age Breakfast Briefing

May 11, 2011

Firm Event

Presented by: Gray Plant Mooty

Join other professionals from Central Minnesota for legal updates on hot topics facing local businesses.

With each passing year, the volume of electronic information created and stored grows exponentially. Now more than ever, businesses must carefully consider their policies for storing and ultimately destroying documents. At this breakfast, we will discuss why document management and records retention matter for businesses. Our discussion will include considerations for setting up and implementing a records retention policy, including specific requirements for retention of records relating to employees. We will also discuss some of the legal obligations for businesses related to security of certain confidential information, such as social security numbers and credit reports. Finally, we will discuss the impact of records retention policies on litigation and discovery.
