Luncheon Keynote | Protecting Your Company From Ransomware

Our keynote speaker for lunch is a Special Agent from the U.S. Secret Service who lives and breathes ransomware and cyberattacks. Get the latest information on recent attacks and what may be coming down the road soon.

Program Topics

- Behavior-Based Data Protection: Preventing the Ransomware Attack | What steps can an organization take to protect itself from a ransomware attack? Although technical measures are important, there are behavior-based processes an organization can use to ensure its workforce doesn't become its weakest link.
- Penetration and Vulnerability Testing | What is the difference between vulnerability and penetration testing? An independent security consultant who has performed thousands of such tests will walk you through the testing process and how best to put the results to use.
- Your Files are Encrypted - Now What? | We will dissect a ransomware attack and describe how your organization can develop or improve effective policies for its response.
- IT Forensics: Evidence Collection - Technical Dos and Don'ts Post-Attack | In stopping an attack and restoring operations, an organization can make technical missteps that destroy evidence of the attack and limit its ability to respond. We will show you how to respond to an attack and resume operations while maintaining necessary evidence.
