You're invited to a free breakfast briefing on cybersecurity and risk management, hosted by GPM attorneys George Meinz and Dorrie Larison.

Not a week goes by without another announcement of a significant security breach, and every business is a potential target. Gone are the days when a good firewall and anti-virus software were enough to protect your business. New avenues of attack - phishing, spear phishing, CEO fraud and vendor risk - have made businesses more vulnerable than ever, and every employee represents a possible point of intrusion.

In order to manage these risks, you need to understand the types of threats and the risks they pose to your confidential business, customer, and financial data. Our discussion will highlight current methods of attack, the threats these attacks pose to your business, and risk mitigation in connection with cyber-attacks.

Topics include:

- An overview of the current cyber-threat landscape
- A discussion of financial security threats
- The importance of third-party vendor risk management
- Employment law issues related to unauthorized disclosure of confidential information
