

Barry Haith Appointed to Committee for St. Louis County Economic Counsel

September 21, 2011

CLAYTON, Mo. (September 21, 2011) – Lathrop Gage partner Barry Haith (Business Litigation – Clayton) has been appointed to the St. Louis County Economic Counsel's Business Retention and Expansion Committee. Haith has previously worked with the SLCEC on projects including aiding in putting together a financial update seminar in 2010.

The Business Retention and Expansion Committee is made up of representatives from the St. Louis County Executive's office, Economic Council, and local business and community representatives to help improve the SLCEC's internal processes and keep St. Louis County's economic development on track.

Haith concentrates his practice on commercial and corporate litigation, construction and real estate litigation, probate and trust litigation and tort litigation. He has previously been selected as a "Rising Star" for Missouri/Kansas Super Lawyers.
