

Health Care

The Lathrop GPM Health Law practice group is dedicated to providing the best client value by offering unmatched experience, deploying an enthusiastic and talented team tailored to each project. We regularly help our clients — from large multi-state delivery systems and health plans to solo rural practitioners — resolve complex regulatory issues, and we work proactively to help implement sensible plans for the future in an ever-shifting regulatory landscape. We take a practical, collaborative approach, working alongside our clients to understand their businesses and empower them to pursue their missions with confidence.

Our areas of deep experience include health care compliance and regulatory matters, health care transactions and health care litigation. We also regularly provide general counsel services to our health care clients and assistance on a wide range of routine business matters, including contracting, employment, labor law, employee benefits and real estate issues.

Health Care Transactions

Lathrop GPM's Health Law team provides the highest levels of expertise, experience and specialization in virtually every type of health care contracting relationship, merger, acquisition and joint venture. Whether it involves negotiating the terms of a physician practice sale to or by a hospital, a long-term professional services or management agreement, adding a hospital to an existing system, adding an additional service or location, forming hospital-physician joint ventures, or enabling providers to collaborate in bringing new services to the community, Lathrop GPM's Health Law practice provides the skills, leadership and creativity critical to developing strategies that meet the challenges presented by such transactions.

- Affiliations, joint ventures and collaborations
- Antitrust counseling in transactions
- Facility and provider licensing
- Health care financing
- Mergers and acquisitions

Health Care Regulatory Counseling

Health care providers in the United States offer their services and conduct their businesses in an environment of ever-changing and highly technical laws and regulations, state and federal oversight, and political and public scrutiny. Lathrop GPM's Health Law team understands that when it comes to compliance, the rules are complex and the stakes are high. We routinely help our clients develop compliance plans and guide them through responding to and defending against federal and state regulatory inquiries.

- Advising diagnostic imaging centers, clinical labs, DMEPOS, HHAs and other ancillary providers
- Antitrust law
- Facility and provider licensing
- False Claims Act
- Federal and state fraud and abuse laws
- Government investigations and self-disclosure
- HIPAA and state privacy, security and breach matters
- Medical staff issues
- Medicare and Medicaid billing and reimbursement issues
- Medicare and Medicaid enrollment, participation and program integrity matters
- Patient rights, including vulnerable adult and child protection laws
- Provider, vendor, and managed care contracting
- Stark Law and Anti-kickback Statute compliance
- State fee splitting and corporate practice of medicine
- Tax and tax exemption law

Academic Medicine

The Lathrop GPM Health Law team is one of the most experienced groups of attorneys working with academic medical centers, as well as their related professional schools (including medical schools, dental schools, nursing schools and schools of pharmacy). Lathrop GPM's extensive Employment & Labor practice group lends us additional knowledge to address the complex, intersecting issues faced by academic medical centers.
