Andrew Ditlevsen is a trusted legal advisor to clients with a range of real estate-related needs. Andrew has over a decade of experience counseling clients in three core pillars of practice: real estate litigation, creditor's rights and manufactured housing law. His long-standing clients are diverse and unique both in their profile and legal needs, which include high-net-worth individuals and families, significant privately held companies, private equity funds and publicly traded companies.

Andrew applies a client-focused, service-based approach across his stable of diverse clients. Consistent delivery on his approach has incubated successfully a deep trust between Andrew and his clients. Among his core values is the deeply held belief that the foundation of every successful relationship – business or personal – is trust rooted in honest communication and mutual respect.

Prior to joining the firm, Andrew was an associate at Sweeney, Mason, Wilson & Bosomworth in Los Gatos, California. While in law school, Andrew was a full-time judicial extern for the Honorable Jeremy Fogel of the United States District Court, Northern District of California.

Outside the office, Andrew is a dedicated father of four children and blessed to be married to a wonderful woman. When time permits, he enjoys spending time outdoors with family and friends, most frequently golfing, hiking and weight lifting.
